DID YOU SEE THE CROWD AT THE GREAT BARGAIN STORE! LAST COURT DAY?

We did our best, but in consequence of the great rush quite a large number had to go away without getting waited on. During the week we have received several large shipments of inapproachable Bargains from the Great New York Auctions and we have marked prices on them that can not be duplicated. These goods are here and must be sold. Inspection solicited.

GARRARD COUNTY DEPARTMENT.

Lancaster.

The "shed removers" have reorganized apparently, their latest exploit being the tearing down of the shed in front of Mr. T. Currey's store.

—William Grim and Miss Annie D. Marrs, Wm. Grant and Miss Mary Hume, all of this county, obtained marriage license last week.

—The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a supper at the City Hall on Thanksgiving evening, the proceeds to be donated to the church. A prominent feature of the occasion will be a "Broom Drill" by twenty-one young ladies.

—Rev. Morris Evans occupied the pulpit at the Christian church Sunday morning and delivered a fine discourse. The annual meeting of the American Bible Society was held at the Baptist church Sunday evening when the usual business of the society was transacted.

—Mr. Tom Wheritt is a dog whose appetite runs largely to chestnuts. He partakes of them in preference to beef, hulks them himself and can spot one containing a worm a great deal quicker than a human being. This is no chestnut; we saw him go through the performance.

—Misses Mattie Williams and Anna Lackey, of Bell Seminary, Danville, were visiting Mrs. Lida Jennings, near town last week. Capt. E. W. Lillard has returned from Frankfort, whither he went on business connected with his company. Mr. Jno. W. Walker, one of Upper Garrard's most substantial citizens, is seriously ill. Mr. John C. Thompson has returned from Cincinnati. Hon. Chas. Offutt, candidate for re-election to the Speakership of the Kentucky House of Representatives, was in town last Thursday. Miss Mamie Olds is visiting Miss Jessie Hamphill at Nicholaville. Mrs. R. E. McRoberts is visiting relatives in Lincoln county. Mr. Sam Peacock received his Postmaster's commission Saturday evening and took charge of the office Monday morning. Mr. John Woodcock is visiting in Somerset. He will leave next Monday for his annual deer hunt at Sunbright, Tenn. Col. Sam Walton is visiting relatives in Mason county. Mr. Louis Landrum has accepted a position in the drug store of E. W. Lillard & Co.

—Judge Robert Johnston, of Harrisonburg, Va., is dead. He was auditor of State, and a member of the Confederate Congress. —Merton A. Root, of Southington, Conn., had a domestic difficulty that prompted his wife to set running two barrels of Merton's cider, which Merton wiped up with Mrs. Root's Sunday silk gown, paying therefor a police court fine of $21 besides probably purchasing another silk dress.

—Col. Geo. Fisher, of Richmond, Va., followed his wife, who had eloped with a drummer named Wm. Cuander, of Atlanta, taking her little boy along. The woman begged piteously to be taken back, and her husband forgave her and returned with her. This is such a rare exhibition of manly virtue that we give it as a curiosity.

DANVILLE, BOYLE COUNTY.

—The New Orleans Minstrels had a large house here Friday night.

—Fannie Williams for stealing several bad quilts from Kitty Arthur was tried Thursday and held in $100 bonds for further trial. All colored.

—The trial of Wm. Goggan for killing a small boy at Junction City last Sept. was to have begun this (Monday) morning, but had not when this report closed.

—Nearly all the Danville doctors were summoned to the Circuit Court at Stanford this morning to testify in the case of Hughes vs. Carpenter, a suit for alleged malpractice.

—Capt. and Mrs. J. H. Wilson will celebrate their tin wedding on the 17th inst. when they will be pleased to have all their friends present. Mrs. Wilson was formerly Miss Amelia H. Hill, of Lincoln county.

—On Friday Jo. Anderson, sometimes called Jo. Carpenter, was tried for house breaking. In that, he broke into Frank Conover's residence and stole a pair of shoes. Jo.'s bond was also $100 and is likewise a colored individual.

—The meeting at the Walnut street Methodist church still continues with immense congregations day and night; general and special prayers are offered for individuals and objects desired. Some of the business men close their houses a part of the day that they and their clerks may attend worship. Others don't close up and go on accumulating wealth. Altogether the meeting is a remarkable one and may continue for an indefinite time.

—Wm. H. Lucas, Esq., who went to Kansas City, Mo., and engaged in the law and real estate business has in four years made over $50,000 clear money. He has moreover abandoned republicanism and joined the righteous old democratic party and a few weeks ago came within three votes of securing the democratic nomination for Mayor of the city. Hurrah for William. Had he remained in Danville he might still have been town attorney had he been a good, goody little boy and not have had an independent thought about anything.

—Dr. D. C. Tucker and family will soon return from Marion county and occupy their home on Third street. Fred Lazarus will soon go to housekeeping in the property recently purchased by him from D. N. Hinman. Dr. W. R. Evans has moved to the property owned by Hon. J. S. Van Winkle on 4th street, lately occupied by Dr. E. J. Nickerson, who has gone to the Central House. Misses Emma and Mattie Redin, of Jefferson county, are visiting the family of their half brother, Mr. J. C. Caldwell. Mrs. Pattie Overall and her daughter, Miss Sue B. Fible, have returned from a visit to the family of Hon. Geo. F. Phillips, of Kansas City, Mo. Col. Logan McKee has returned from a business trip to Missouri. John H. Stodghill will soon begin to travel for a Cincinnati firm.

—Mrs. John W. Shelly, of Lincoln county, is at the Clemens' House under the treatment of Dr. Johnston for an affection of the eyes. —Mr. Theo. Linney is about the latest of the new papas in Danville. A fine boy arrived Saturday evening.

—Old Honesty." The Washington Herald has the following to say about our own Milton: "Judge Durham, the First Controller of the Treasury, is one of the men who would seem to add much credit to this Administration. He has a peculiarly clear, logical mind; he has no enemies except the pirates of the Treasury to fight, and he has no friends to serve. I believe he is the most independent man who has been in Washington for many years. He does take anything for granted, but examines every point in the eyes of the law. There is little danger of his making mistakes, because he takes advice of that other famous Kentuckian, Davy Crockett, and knows he is right before he goes ahead. He said to me the other day that the first thing he always reads in his evening paper is the receipts at the Treasury for that day. He doesn't intend to have the expenditures exceed the income if he can help it. In personal appearance he is the very impersonation of the old-fashioned democratic statesman; honesty and fearlessness are stamped in every feature of his closely-shaven face. He is more than six feet in height and is deliberate in utterance, emphasizing every important word."

—Dr. John Mackey, a well-known character in Covington, committed suicide Friday by jumping from the bridge across the Ohio.

GEO. O. BARNES.

PROSPECT POINT, LANDOUR, N. INDIA, Sept. 29, 1885.

DEAR INTERIOR.—The delicious weather and the steady coming "break up" of the entire station, has developed on all hands almost feverish impulsion to get all the good out of the few remaining days of social companionship possible. This comes out in universal daily picnicing. Every body wants to live in the open air as much as possible. The almost constant confinement "in doors" for 4 months of continuous rains, followed by the emancipation afforded by blue skies and balmy air, begets a life such as prisoners, just out of jail, might be expected to appreciate. The entire lot of escaped "jail-birds" broken up into congenial "cliques" according to the well-known principle that "birds of a feather flock together," swarm out, daily, into many places of resort, with which these beautiful hills abound, and enjoy themselves according to the varying tastes that rule the different troupes of merry makers.

We in Landour have most charming and very frequent reunions.

We have just returned from Bhutta falls, 4 miles away, where our kind friend, Col. Marshall, had invited us to a picnic, which we enjoyed in the most delightful way. A sumptuous feast, followed as well as preceded by charming rambles up and down a most romantic bit of water, that comes tumbling down from our own hills, and meanders off down the Dhoon to its confluence with the noble Jumna. (By the way, in consequence of my stupidity making my J's like I's, you have persistently printed that grand river as Jumna, which of course is terribly absurd to us, though to your readers, generally, who never look at a map and take my letters as a very temporary entertainment, it is all one, whichever way the types spell the word.) Well—returning to our picnic—we had the usual amount of adventure, with no serious mishaps. Three of the ladies slipped into the water, off mossy, treacherous rocks and got wet to the waist, and several of the gents in gallant attempt to give assistance at various times, did some deep wading with the usual consequences. But no bad results followed, and everybody took it cheerfully if not merrily.

We are all rapidly getting back what we necessary lost in vigor and constitutional tone during the close confinement of the Monsoon. And we hope to be in good working trim by the time our fall and winter work comes on, whatever it may be.

The folks are waking up—as usual at the "eleventh hour"—and we are to have a series of 4 services in our large station "Municipal Hall," where I hope good will be done. We are quite happy at the good results that have followed our Tuesday and Thursday Bible readings, kept up without cessation, since our coming to Landour.

I have just read in the London Daily Morning Post which dear George Wood sends regularly the following delightful and, I confess rather startling speech of our minister to the court of St. James. It was delivered at the "Cutler's Feast" at Sheffield, where Lord Randolph Churchill made an able address in defense of conservative policy. This rising statesman and leader in British politics, was followed by our Mr. Phelps in an answer to a toast to the "United States Minister." Here is his speech. Please print it, and give the last words in italics.

THE CUTLERS' FEAST.

Mr. Phelps, in responding, gratefully acknowledged the kind feeling and fraternal cordiality which prevailed throughout Great Britain for the country which he had the honor to represent, and said that the feeling was fully reciprocated on the other side of the Atlantic. (Cheers.) In America the name of Sheffield had become synonymous with superiority of manufacture. He was glad to observe that the British Government had nominated a Royal Commission to investigate concerning the existing depression of trade, which, he added, had also been more or less experienced in the United States. It was well to see whether the uses of adversity could be made sweet by finding out its causes. If he were to venture an opinion on the subject, it would be that the haste to get rich, extravagance of living, and the flooding of the world with goods too numerous for purchasers and too cheap for producers, were probably among the principal causes of the depression which we now had occasion to regret. (Hear, hear.) If any word which he should ever utter on British soil should linger in British memory after he had been replaced by another representative, let it be first and last, and always a renewed and repeated plea for the complete, the hearty, the unanimous fraternization of the English-speaking race all round the world. (Cheers.)

These italic words I wish to call special attention to. It is the one thing next to the gospel, I have most at heart just now.

It is the result of my being "added to" the "Church of England," in great part. My whole soul is in this federation of the Anglo-Saxon race, for I know that it is to be the hope of the world—now that the Anglo Saxons are made out, demonstrably, as the Israel of the lost "10 tribes;" and they alone hold the gospel of the "grace of God in trust for a lost world. And dear America, as the eldest sister of the federation, keeping still her republicanism, till clearer light and more matured historical and biblical developments bring out an irrepressible loyalty to the God appointed head of "all Israel," with no violent rupture of any existing arrangement; no disloyalty to what we have found true and good; no retrogression in anything worth retention; nothing but the working out in spontaneous joy, what all sees to be right this is the thing nearer to my heart than anything, but the dear LOVE of God, and the love of my family; indeed, going side by side with both, as third in a trinity of loving desires, and unalterable purposes.

Do you wonder, dear reader, that Mr. Phelps's little speech startled me with a joyful thrill, that I would I could share, with some who read this letter. Ever in Jesus,

GEO. O. BARNES.

Verily, man is fearful and wonderfully Maid of Athens and his clothes are not paid for. When he is a tiny baby he cries because he can't walk and when he can walk he wont, and waits for hours for the street car or elevator. When he has good health he ruins it, and when it is ruined he takes good care of it and declares it "never was better." He goes to sleep in church and lies awake in bed and worries about that may never happen on a morrow that may never dawn.—[Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.]

Semi-Weekly Interior Journal

Stanford, Ky., November 10, 1885

W. P. WALTON.

It is to be hoped that some legislator will distinguish himself at Frankfort this winter by procuring the passage of a law that shall more adequately punish the crime of attempted rape. As the law stands the penalty is only from two to seven years in the penitentiary, which to the brutes who commit this class of crime is neither a sufficient punishment, nor does it act as a deterrent from its commission. Take for instance the case of the negro, Lewis Anderson, just disposed of in our Circuit Court. In the absence of the husband of a respectable and worthy lady, he sought to gratify his beastly desires upon her, and but for her unusual strength and the assistance of a faithful dog would have accomplished that most heinous of horrible crimes. Nor did he desist until he had shot the dog and attempted to frighten her into submission with a pistol by threats of a like fate and which, failing to do so, he used to beat her over the head. Is it strange then that men who wish to see their own wives protected from such brutes, in view of the inadequacy of the punishment imposed by the law for such crimes, should rise and inflict a more summary and condign punishment upon the perpetrator of such a deed? As it stands the penalty is simply a menace and an invitation to mob violence, and so long as it stands upon the statute books will men seek to do themselves what the law fails so short in doing. Incarceration with the ever present possibility of escape from it is no punishment to brutes who commit such crimes. There must be something that will reach their own foul bodies and if death be considered too great a penalty for the crime well proven, we suggest that castration be made the punishment. This would scarcely be less horrible than death itself, for the victim would at once become a reproach among men and despised by himself. With the law so enacted that castration shall follow every proven case of attempted rape and death when the attempt is successful, we shall hear less of the commission of these crimes and fewer occasions for that ever to be deplored action, a resort to mob violence. We hope the legislature will therefore see that such a law or a better one shall be placed upon the statute books during the coming term.

The Coat of Arms of Virginia represents a prostrate man with another standing over him with his foot upon his throat, underneath which appear the words "Sic Semper Tyrannis." The under dog in the fight may now be called Mahone, who has ruled the State with a tyrant's will, the other represents the true democracy crushing his life out and giving him no time to repeat the Irishman's translation of the Latin: "Take your foot off my neck." We hope the little traitor will be as thoroughly ostracized socially as he has been politically, so that he will leave his country for his country's good, no more to return. The legislature that will select his successor in the Senate will have democratic majority of 60 on joint ballot.

The democratic majority in New York is 12,027, more than 1,000 in excess of our first report. But even this gratifying majority appears insignificant when compared with Hill's majority for lieutenant governor when he ran with Cleveland in 1882. Then it was 100,781 or about 4,000 more than Cleveland's. But the result then is not to be compared with that of last week. The fight this time was a regular stand up one between the two parties. Three years ago the republican candidate, Folger, was nominated by such fraudulent means that the honest men of his party were forced to rebuke it.

MAHONE on being solicited by his republican friends to stand for Congress next year in his district, positively declined saying that he will not return to public life with clipped wings at the end of his senatorial term, preferring to follow private pursuits and enjoying his Virginia home. He ought to go into his hole and draw it in after him. The people of Virginia will not enjoy his enjoyment of a home in their midst except to observe how greatly his fine plumage has been clipped.

The suit against Young E. Allison, Geo. W. Smith and the Louisville Press Company for criminal libel on Mayor Booker Reed has been dismissed, the company filing a disclaimer that in making the publication they did not intend to impugn his honesty or to charge fraud and corruption against him. Messrs. Allison and Smith distinctly avow in the Truth that they disclaimed nothing, but on the contrary reiterated all and more than they ever said.

THAT rate desert the sinking ship is plainly shown by the election returns of Iowa, which heretofore could always be depended on by the republicans for 60,000 to 100,000 majority this year only gave its candidate for governor a pitiful 7,664 majority. The year of jubilee, if not already here, is approaching with the rapidity of a cyclone.

HAVING no confidence in his election and with an eye open to the main and surest chance, Ira Davenport, defeated candidate for governor of New York, froz to his seat in Congress and will winter in Washington instead of Albany.

THE Louisville Times speaks of our excellent Congressman as "Tom" McCrory. Emmett Logan has evidently not returned from that big hunt in Warren county.

Louisville's oldest man, Asa Emerson, aged 102, is dead.

CONGRESS meets four weeks from yesterday. The House is composed of 325 members and the democrats have a majority over everything of 42. Carlisle has practically no opposition for Speaker and there is no doubt of his succeeding himself, all of which is exactly as it should be. It is also given out that Sam Randall will join the revenue reformers at least to a limited extent.

AS EVIDENCE that a Blackburn craves as much for office as a thirsty man does for water - or whisky, we will state that Capt. James Blackburn, late Secretary of State, and an applicant for the Collectorship, has given up hope for federal preferment, and now offers for county judge of Woodford. What a fall indeed is this, my countrymen!

JOSÉ BILLINGS accumulated $93,000 by writing title paragraphs in wretched orthography, which proves that it was not such a bad spell after all.

NOTES OF CURRENT EVENTS.

The number of emigrants that arrived at New York during the last year is 356,906.

Wanda, in her two years upon the turf, has won twelve races and $65,510 in stakes.

The Grant monument fund has reached $94,000. The million desired will never be forthcoming.

The war department cost the country last year $13,483,727. The army pay rolls took $12,349,443.

Ten inches of snow fell in Dakota Thursday and in many parts of Ohio the ground was covered.

J. L. McLain, County Attorney for Oldham county, is a defaulter to the amount of $2,500 and has fled to the West.

The contest for Mahone's seat in the U. S. Senate between Barbour and Daniel West evidently agrees with him.

Mrs. AKIN, Misses Lilla Foster and Berrie Snail and Mr. Dan Lyons, of Danville, and Will White and Eb. Higgins, of Lancaster, were among those from a distance at the opening of the Rink.

MISS MILDRED LEWIS has returned from her visit to Miss Mamie Bryant in Virginia delighted with the Old Dominion, many of whose principal points she visited, including the Natural Bridge, Richmond and Old Point Comfort.

DA. J. H. BALLOU, who recently graduated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, has decided that the West offers a more desirable field for a physician and with the view of locating in Kansas City, left Saturday. He may however spend the winter in Louisville. He is a most deserving young man and we commend him to the people, no matter where he may settle.

HON. CHARLES OFFUTT, leading candidate for Speaker of the next House and editor Green R. Keller, of the Carlisle Mercury, who wants to be clerk of the same body, were here last week and honored our sanctum with their presence. While Mr. Keller's chances for election are not as sure as Mr. Offutt's, yet he has many pledged votes, and if a certain other man were not a candidate, we should rather see him elected than anybody.

J. T. BREWSTER man Baker, who murdered Asa Miller, colored, at Jellico, was captured in Louisville as he was bound for the boundless West and brought back for trial.

THE Rink opened in foul weather but with a fair crowd and skating was kept up for several hours much to the enjoyment of the participants. The music of the Gold and Silver Band was highly complimented and Mr. Joe F. Waters, who played a baritone solo, was so loudly encored that he had to respond to the demand. There was a number of persons from Lancaster and Danville present, who added much to the pleasure of the evening.

In deference to the wishes of some irresistible little maidens, the evening closed with a dance but there is so much objection to this mode of closing by the mothers of those who do not dance, that the manager thinks it best to say that hereafter the two pleasures will not be combined. There are other nights that the hall can be used by those who delight to glide through the dreamy mazes of the waltz. Those who come to skate pay for the privilege and have the right to enjoy it.

The Rink will be open next Friday night and each succeeding Friday night until further notice. Come everybody.

The Gold & Silver Band announces the following programme for the next entertainment:

PART I.
 1 Splinters—Grand Musical Smash-up. Rollinson

 11 "Splinters"—Grand Musical Smash-up, or the tribulations of a band leader on the 4th of July—every member of the band tries to have a solo, and the base solo is immense.

A DISPATCH from Atlanta, Ga., tells of the death in the Fulton county jail of Prof George M. Chevis, who used to teach school in this county. He was an editor at the time of his death, which was caused by mental depression, which developed into a disease, growing out of his crime. On the 25th of October, 1884, he shot and killed Capt. J. H. Pickett. Chevis had promised to support Pickett for the legislature and then failed to do so. Pickett thereupon cut Chevis' acquaintance. This awoke up the editor's mind that he procured a shot gun, sought out Pickett and shot him dead.

CIRCUIT COURT.—The case of William Hocker, negro, for attempted rape on a little negro girl, was tried Friday, but the jury failed to agree and it was reset for trial-to-day. William Vanoy was pronounced an idiot and placed upon the charge of the State. Mary Stuart, wife of Caarley Stuart, cold, was adjudged a lunatic and ordered to the asylum.

The negro, Lewis Anderson, charged with attempted rape on Mrs. J. H. Hiatt, was quietly brought over from Lexington Thursday night and the case fixed for immediate trial. Attorneys P. M. McRoberts and T. P. Hill, Jr., were appointed to defend him and he first decided to undergo a regular trial, but fear of violence grew so great that he sent for the gentlemen again and said he wanted to plead guilty. He was immediately taken into court, a jury impanelled and the case submitted with that plea, and he was given the fullest extent of the law, seven years in the penitentiary.

Judge Osley, with commendable precaution, then passed sentence on him and ordered that he be at once taken to the Lexington jail to await the time for taking the other prisoners to Frankfort. During the delivery of the sentence, the negro showed the most abject terror and any movement in the house caused him to start as if shot. Judge Osley told him he should be protected, but the negro was well aware of the vengeance that might be visited upon him and he was greatly relieved when placed in a vehicle and hurried off to take the train at the Hanging Fork tank. En route his guards asked him for the truth of the charges against him, when he confessed everything and said he knew not what impelled him to do the crime as he had not premeditated it. The punishment is far too light for the heinousness of the crime, but the law is to blame for that and not the court. Judge Osley deserves the highest commendation for his precaution in the matter and for using every means to prevent any attempt to mob the scoundrel, he was sworn to protect while in the hands of the law.

Henry Robertis was brought out for sentence Friday and the Judge after recalling the atrocity of his crime, which, but for his youth, the jury would have punished with death or life imprisonment, admonished him that he yet had enough of life to make amends and hoped that he would come from the State prison resolved to do so. He then passed the sentence of 13 years on him for the murder of Nick Bene diet. Robertis is but 17 years of age.

William Carson was also sentenced after he had made a little speech in answer to the Judge's question if he had anything to say why the verdict should not be executed. He acknowledged that he had been given two fair trials, but said his act was in self defense and that therefore he ought not to be punished. The sentence was passed but suspended for 60 days to await the result of an appeal.

The case of R. C. Engleman for shooting Smith Baughman was continued as it like ly will be till all the witnesses forget who was shot and who did the shooting.

E. Johnson, one of the four negroes charged with pursuing the Misses Marcus with criminal intent, was put upon trial Saturday but the Court adjourned before it was concluded, till yesterday. The prosecution proved the charges but the defense which was represented by Messrs. Masterson Peyton and T. P. Hill, Jr., attempted to show, and that seems to be the impression of those who heard the testimony, that the negro was mistaken in the character of the women, though there could be no excuse for persistence in the pursuit. W. H. Miller assisted Mr. Warren in the prosecution and at 11 o'clock yesterday the jury after a short retirement returned a verdict of three years in the penitentiary.

All common law cases have been continued till next term as the Court will hardly get through the criminal business before its forced adjournment Saturday. Two murder cases, four attempts at rape and one grand larceny case remain to be tried and nearly all the accused are in jail.

Much difficulty was found yesterday in obtaining a jury in the case of Sam Embry, who is likewise charged with despoiling the Misses Marcus. But 8 could be obtained out of the regular panel and Judge Osley ordered Sheriff Menefee to summon a sufficient number of men from the McKinney neighborhood to complete the jury. Pending the arrival of the men the negro asked to be permitted to confess and take three years and his wishes were gratified. A worse case could have been made against him than that of Johnson.

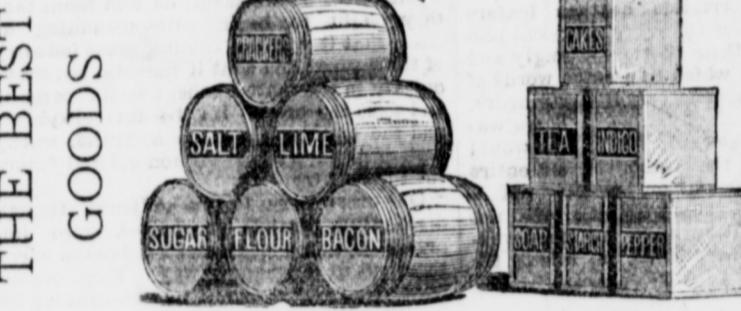

HERE IT IS.—A. & W. H. Traylor are retailing pure water brandy and whisky at their distillery premises at $2.40 per gal. for the former and $2 for the latter.

OPENED—Billy Weatherford has at last succeeded in getting his bar room opened at Richmond, the first that has openly existed there for six years. A bond of $5,000 was required of him besides a license of $1,200. If the people of the town are to have a whisky establishment in their midst it is well for them that it will be kept by decent and clever a man.

THE TRUE GYPSY.

THE ROMANY OF THE BETTER KIND
A HAPPY RACE.An Assembly of Handsome Faces and Graceful Figures—Loafing a Real Substantial Pleasure—A Wonderful
Talent for Languages.(Leland's St. Malo [France] Letter.)
The other day I went to the beautiful town of Dinan to see the cathedral, and ancient houses, and quaint streets, and it proved to me to be a museum ethnological as well as archaeological. For it was by good luck the day of the great fair, and all the town was filled with Breton peasant women, in every variety of the curious caps peculiar to them. It was really a remarkable sight. Some of these caps are singularly pretty, and I am very sorry that I had not an opportunity to sketch one, of which, of course, I never saw another example. But if there were pretty caps there were no pretty faces.

THE GYPSIES.

As soon as I had made that remark I saw one of the most beautiful girls I ever beheld in my life. There were seven or eight people in a group—one girl and the rest men—lying on the grass under the castle-walls eating their dinner. Dark almost as Indians, all of them, with wild, flashing eyes and an indescribably easy, lithe expression of limb, which belonged to no European race. At a glance I knew the true, pure gypsy. Stepping I said in French: "Etes-vous Tsigan?" ("Are you gypsy?") "Qui, Monsieur," replied one politely, yet without moving. Then I said in their own tongue: "Good day, brothers; can you not talk Romany?" And then they moved I need quickly enough, and crowded round me.

I never saw in my life in an assembly of the same number so many handsome faces, figures, or so much natural grace. They were neatly clad and very clean, and compared with our American-English gypsies as deer or leopards would compare with coarse cattle. I never saw any people so entirely and thoroughly delighted as they were, the pleasure being vastly increased when they found I could talk German, for they were all natives of the Fatherland. They were wandering musicians, haunting fairs, and so made themselves as nice-looking as they could. It is a strange thought that he who can talk Romany should be a stranger in no land, for the instant he meets with the wanderers (Romany is possibly connected with the Hindu rama, "to roam") he is regarded as a special friend. I think that our meeting on that grassy slope under the old castle walls would have made a good picture.

A HAPPY RACE.

The Romany, especially of this better kind, are really a very happy race, and what is good for them is that they know it. Once in a while one of them gets into trouble for obtaining a hen without proper preparatory negotiation with the owner, or for "acquiring" a clean shirt a la Petuleton V. Nasby. Then he has to live indoors for many days, and returning to his tribe draws a fearful picture of existence in a house. Not being ashamed to beg, they never want for a dinner—no man ever does in this world who is devoid of shame and can offer the thinnest shadow of a pretense or recompence. The gypsy woman tells fortunes or sings a song; her husband trades horses, plays the fiddle, and is always on hand at a pig fair or any place where quick wit helps to a treat.

Leaving, which is to others only a form of enui, is to him a real substantial pleasure—nay, life itself in all its best; and with a pipe of tobacco he asks for nothing more. Since the prehistoric ages his ancestors loosed in many lands and laid on the grass, and begged, and stole, and were hanged or banished; but they took it all philosophically and easily. Ethnologists dispute as to their origin—but of one thing we are certain, that whenever they came from there they loaded on a stupendous scale, for as Mr. Petulengro, who was one of them, remarked, "When we are not engaged in getting our victuals we are mostly occupied with our diversions, so that between the two we have very little time for improving our minds." So they don't improve them, but seem to be none the less healthy, happy, and handsome.

Why such incorrigible heathen loafers should be gifted with every physical perfection, when their betters are ugly and ailing is a puzzle which to use the words of Saint Chrysostom, me percutit extempore, "knocks me out of my time." There was not a scamp in that camp whose face would not have turned the heads of an entire girls' boarding-school, or, possibly, of a convent. These German gypsies are not only handsome. They have all that wonderful, innate, sprightly, a talent for languages which is so very rare among Europeans.

Mme. Jerome Bonaparte.

[Baltimore Herald.]

In her old age Mme. Jerome Bonaparte, of Baltimore, the American beauty who married a brother of the great Napoleon, and was repudiated by him, demanded a great deal more admiration than she got. At an entertainment she considered herself neglected by the gentleman, who paid most of their attention to a couple of newly-married ladies. She endured it for sometime, and then remarked to the first one who found a little time to spare with her: "Do you know, Mr. X., that I consider it the most foolish thing in the world for a gentleman to pay attention to a young married lady?"

"Indeed, madam!" responded the gallant, and why?

"Because a young married woman is only a girl who belongs to somebody else."

It was Mme. Bonaparte who observed to an old acquaintance: "If Mrs. X. only had teeth she would be as ugly as Mrs. Y., and if Mrs. Y. had hair she would be prettier than Mrs. X."

The French as Colonizers.

[Blackwood's Magazine.]

The French moral fibre is not strong enough to withstand the conserving and demoralizing effect of debased Oriental life. Instead of raising the natives to their own level they fall to the level of the natives, and by this process they lose all title to respect, as well as all the influence for good which should attach to them as belonging to a higher and a Christian civilization. With the loss of respect goes also the confidence of the natives in the justice and fair dealing of their conquerors, and the French have no other weapon than the chassepot with which to encounter the dislikes and unwillingness to submit thus engendered.

A KANSAS PRAIRIE.

[Mrs. Ellen P. Allerton.]
The people of this brave new world have come from every quarter; some faced each other long ago, on red fields bathed in slaughter.In frosty dawns of winter morns
The white smokecurls away
From homes of men who wore the blouse
And man who wore the gray.Here, brothers all, they hang their gifts
On the same Christmas trees,
Are kindly neighbors, cordial friends,
As brothers ought to be.And crowds of children, Kansas-born—
The young state's hope and pride—
With rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes,
Learn lessons side by side.Naught rock they of the battle-field,
Of sad, dark years of slaughter;
The Northman's son some day shall wed
The Southron's gentle daughter.

LIFE IN MARSEILLES.

The Death Rate—Joyousness and Abandon—
Open-Air Sleepers.[Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.]
The ordinary death rate of the city proves the insidious conditions. Even in summers called healthy it is forty or fifty a day, nearly four times that of San Francisco, or any other American city, of from 25,000 to 300,000 inhabitants. Since the advent of the cholera, two months ago, it has several times reached eighty-five per day, of whom somewhat less than half were from cholera.

No change is perceptible in the daily life of the people. Business goes on as usual. The principal streets are filled with persons engaged in their ordinary vocations or bent on pleasure. The cafes and shaded promenades, which are numerous, have their multitudes of loungers, day and evening. The evenings are noisy with the shouting of sailors who have indulged too freely in rum or absinthe, or vocal with the songs of party of musicians. There is, in a word, all the noise, joyousness and abandon that might be expected in a brilliant provincial metropolis.

But under this gayety are abundant signs of the poverty and misery which furnish the elements of disease. The benches furnished for the accommodation of the public in the promenades and shaded streets and places must exceed 1,000, and I never passed these localities at a late hour without seeing every one occupied by one or two sleepers—often a whole family—father, mother and young children. I have also often seen homeless women with little daughters sleeping on doorsteps, vagabonds reposing contentedly in the most unexpected public places, and have never passed along the quay of the old port without being able to count these houseless wanderers by scores, if not by hundreds.

Those who every night stow themselves in secure nooks and corners no account can be made, but it is safe to estimate that 5,000 or 6,000 persons of both sexes and all ages in Marseilles have no roof to cover them, and are obliged to sleep in the open air every night in this season of cholera. Usually during the summer the weather is mild and great discomfort comes from the exposure, but just now the chilly wind of the Rhone, the mistral, is prevailing, and the air after midnight is so cold that it is really quite suggestive of frost. It is a temperature to which robust and warmly dressed persons could not long expose themselves without discomfort or danger to their health.

Harpers, S. C., July 9, 1884.

"For eighteen months I suffered with Chills and Fever, having Chills every other day. After trying various remedies recommended to cure, I used a bottle of Ayer's Ague Cure, and have never since had a chill." EDWIN HARPER.

How Salmon Canning Was Started. [Chicago Tribune.]

The salmon cannery industry in Oregon is attributed altogether to a suggestion of that queer genius, George Francis Train. Some years ago Train was to deliver a lecture in Portland, and in the afternoon before he was to speak engaged in salmon fishing. He met with great success, and was amazed at the quantity of the great fish in the river. He could talk of nothing else, and begged the lecture committee who had engaged him to allow a substitution of salmon for the subject of his address in place of the one announced. This the committee would not agree to, and Train began the speech announced in the advertisements.

He got along very well for half an hour or so, and then the attraction of the theme uppermost in his mind proved too much for him. He left his original subject and began to talk about salmon. He drew a salmon on the blackboard; and decided that the people before him were neglecting a mine of wealth close beside them; he told them that they ought to begin salmon-canning at once; it was the coming great industry of the region; and that if they did not move quickly in the matter others would come in and seize the prize. He became eloquent, and the lecture ended in a grand, wordy panorama showing a salmon-colored future for the country.

One or two men in the audience, though discounting Train's prophecies, were impressed with his ideas, and resolved to carry them out in a practical way. They organized a company, and the salmon-canning industry was begun.

Profits of the Pool-Room. [Chicago Herald.]

"I have no shopping to do now," said a pool-seller's wife the other day to a lady acquaintance, "and I am just put out about it." "Why?" was the query. "Why, my husband brings more trash home than you can think of. There is not a night that he doesn't bring in a half-dozen of nice things that he gets in the pool-room. You've no idea. He has everything—from diamond shirt-studs to silk handkerchiefs, and such things, and bag completely 'busted' as he calls it; then they put up their trinkets for money to buy pool tickets with, and half the time they never redeem them, so he brings them home. Nice business, isn't it?"

SONOROUS AND FERVENT. [New York Times.]

When Vestryman Green bowed his head to read the responses of the litany the other Sunday, he was very drowsy indeed, and he had repeated "Lord have mercy upon us miserable sinners" but three times when he fell fast asleep. His wife nudged him with her parasol without success.

When the minister reached, "And now, seventeenth, my beloved brethren," Vestryman Green awoke, and being unconscious of the lapse of time responded in a sonorous and fervent voice:

"Lord have mercy upon us miserable sinners."

For Instant Use

As a reliable remedy, in cases of Croup, Whooping Cough, or sudden Colds, and for the prompt relief and cure of throat and lung diseases, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable. Mrs. E. G. Edgely, Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes: "I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy for home use. I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults." John H. Stoddard, Petersburg, Va., writes: "I have never found a medicine equal to

for the prompt relief of throat and lung diseases peculiar to children. I consider it an absolute cure for all such affections, and am never without it in the house."

Mrs. L. E. Herman, 187 Mercer st., Jersey City, writes: "I have always found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral useful in my family." B. T. Johnson, Mt. Savage, Md., writes: "For the speedy cure of sudden Colds, and for the relief of children afflicted with Croup, I have never found anything equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the most potent of all the remedies I have ever used." W. H. Stickler, Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured my wife of a severe lung affection, supposed to be Quick Consumption. We now regard the Pectoral as a household necessity." E. M. Breckinridge, Braintree, Minn., writes: "I am subject to Bronchitis, and wherever I go, am always sure to have a bottle of

with me. It is without a rival for the cure of bronchial affections."

How Salmon Canning Was Started. [Chicago Tribune.]

The salmon cannery industry in Oregon is attributed altogether to a suggestion of that queer genius, George Francis Train. Some years ago Train was to deliver a lecture in Portland, and in the afternoon before he was to speak engaged in salmon fishing. He met with great success, and was amazed at the quantity of the great fish in the river. He could talk of nothing else, and begged the lecture committee who had engaged him to allow a substitution of salmon for the subject of his address in place of the one announced. This the committee would not agree to, and Train began the speech announced in the advertisements.

He got along very well for half an hour or so, and then the attraction of the theme uppermost in his mind proved too much for him. He left his original subject and began to talk about salmon. He drew a salmon on the blackboard; and decided that the people before him were neglecting a mine of wealth close beside them; he told them that they ought to begin salmon-canning at once; it was the coming great industry of the region; and that if they did not move quickly in the matter others would come in and seize the prize. He became eloquent, and the lecture ended in a grand, wordy panorama showing a salmon-colored future for the country.

One or two men in the audience, though discounting Train's prophecies, were impressed with his ideas, and resolved to carry them out in a practical way. They organized a company, and the salmon-canning industry was begun.

Profits of the Pool-Room. [Chicago Herald.]

"I have no shopping to do now," said a pool-seller's wife the other day to a lady acquaintance, "and I am just put out about it." "Why?" was the query. "Why, my husband brings more trash home than you can think of. There is not a night that he doesn't bring in a half-dozen of nice things that he gets in the pool-room. You've no idea. He has everything—from diamond shirt-studs to silk handkerchiefs, and such things, and bag completely 'busted' as he calls it; then they put up their trinkets for money to buy pool tickets with, and half the time they never redeem them, so he brings them home. Nice business, isn't it?"

SONOROUS AND FERVENT. [New York Times.]

When Vestryman Green bowed his head to read the responses of the litany the other Sunday, he was very drowsy indeed, and he had repeated "Lord have mercy upon us miserable sinners" but three times when he fell fast asleep. His wife nudged him with her parasol without success.

When the minister reached, "And now, seventeenth, my beloved brethren," Vestryman Green awoke, and being unconscious of the lapse of time responded in a sonorous and fervent voice:

"Lord have mercy upon us miserable sinners."

Augusta Chronicle: To look at any ordinary newspaper, the reader would come to the conclusion that the whole world was sick, and that nothing would keep it from dying but the cure-all preparations which are so cunningly and ingeniously presented as to deceive the healthiest mind or stomach.

China Ahead of Europe. [North China Mail.]

Where a European takes his dog out for a walk a Chinaman carries a cage, imprisoned in which is a bird, and when he sits down to rest he hangs the cage upon a tree in order that he may enjoy the flood of melody which is poured forth from the bird's throat.

German: To look at everything in a gloomy light is silly, in a roseate hue is a delusion.
